

Morivivi

Para la prima Judith Ortiz Cofer

By Ricardo Nazario y Colón

En la loma del viento where we imagined pyramids with tails catching wind, while sailing diurnally across the sky, there, you taught my bare feet, the price of waking the Morivivi.

In Hormigueros, when you were a little girl, the grown ups told you

“las niñas no saltan sobre alambres de púas”

nor do they play with cow pies.
Your dress occasionally snagged at the further most guardarraya, en resistencia.

On the day you disappeared.
I found your note entre las hojas dormidas. Tus palabras being from a foreign time, decían,

Para el primo,
Me voy afuera, busca por mi adentro del sol.

Today, the familiar warmth of the sun,
me despierta como el toque al Morivivi.
